A CRITICAL DAY.

To-day is a most important day in the istory of the Democratic party, and onsequently in the political history of the country.

The mission on which the Democratic party returned to power two years ago carried Congress as well as the Presiency, giving the House of Representa tives a large Democratic majority and revolutionizing the Republican Senate. That mission is not wholly fulfilled; yet the victorious party has through a number of causes lost the confidence of the nation. It is not now necessary to discuss the faults and errors that have brought about this condition of affairs, nor the responsibility for them. The question is, how can they be remedied In this State, the most important in the Union in its influence on the Presidential election, the evil has been the obsetty, his face made up to look exmost marked and serious. The Republicans carried the State last year through the aid of Democrats, who left the Democratic party because of the blunders and misdeeds of those who were in conand misdeeds of those who were in conwhy Crane dressed his characters in
